

Meet your CFMT Relationship Manager Erin Holcomb

Erin leads the operations and administration of the Philanthropic Services Team, ensuring efficient processes for donor onboarding, stewardship, and engagement. She oversees team workflows, manages reporting systems, mentors team associates, and collaborates with Communications to optimize donor communications.

In addition to operational leadership, she manages a portfolio of fundholders, supporting their charitable giving, grantmaking, and philanthropic strategies. Through strategic coordination and personalized service, she enhances donor experiences, strengthens relationships, and ensures seamless alignment with CFMT's mission and goals.

In her spare time, she and her husband, Craig, love spending time outdoors with their son – Charlie. They are devoted pet owners to four animals and enjoy traveling with their families to explore new destinations.

Fun Facts about Erin

What's your favorite part of working at CFMT?

In my 17+ years of working at CFMT, I have to say it's our donors and their stories. Connecting donors with their philanthropic goals is what drives me personally to create a better world for me, my family and those who will follow us.

Dream job:

Oh that's easy! A freelance, travel-writer. It would allow me to explore new places, while writing about all about the destination.

Favorite place you've traveled:

So far I would have to say Florence, Italy. The Tuscany region of Italy is full of organic and local cuisine, great shopping and delicious wine.

Currently reading/watching/listening to:

My life right now consists of all things "Bluey," "Paw Patrol" and the "Wheels on the Bus" song. In all seriousness, I just finished "Hacks" on HBO Max and am holding my breath for the next "Bridgerton" release.

Favorite live music venue:

Basement East. It's an intimate, local venue in my neighborhood.

Best piece of advice:

"People will forget what you said, people will forget what you did, but people will never forget how you made them feel." - Maya Angelou
